goose down

The support and touch that only goose down can offer.

Pillows are like mini-mattresses for the head and the neck. Just like a mattress, a good pillow must support the head and the neck in such a way as to ensure that their natural positions are not altered. When we lie on our back, the pillow must support our head and neck and keep them in the same place and position as they have when we are standing up. To achieve this, the pillow must have the appropriate size and height required to 'fill' the gap between the mattress and the curve of the neck. If the pillow is too big, the head will be pushed upwards, thus overstressing the cervical vertebrae and potentially causing damage. If the pillow is too small, the head hangs backwards and the vertebrae are pushed together causing headaches and general feeling of discomfort.

COCO-MAT offers a wide collection of pillows (most of which can be individually customized as they are equipped with zippers which enable the user to extract material and adapt the pillows to his/her individual needs) varying in sizes and filling materials used to meet all individual requirements.
